

Practising Respecting Elders

Chapter 3: Respecting Elders · Topic 2

Key Concept

We show respect to elders by greeting them politely, listening when they speak, and helping them when they need it, like carrying something heavy.

Elders have a lot of experience and wisdom, so listening to their advice can help us learn important things about life.

Respecting elders also means not interrupting them while they speak and using polite words when talking to them.

Showing respect to elders, like grandparents, teachers, and older neighbours, helps build strong, caring relationships across generations.

Quick Revision Notes

- Respecting elders means being polite and listening to them.
- We can greet elders politely and help them when needed.
- Elders have experience and wisdom.
- Listening to elders can teach us important things.
- Respecting elders means not interrupting them.
- We should use polite words when talking to elders.
- Elders include grandparents, teachers and older neighbours.
- Respecting elders builds strong relationships across generations.

Practice Questions

- 1 Greet an elder politely today.
- 2 Help an elder with a small task.
- 3 Ask an elder to share a piece of advice or a story.
- 4 Talk about why respecting elders is important.
- 5 Practice listening without interrupting when an elder speaks.
- 6 Thank an elder for something they have taught you.