

My District, My State

Chapter 3: My District, My State · Topic 1

Key Concept

India has many states, each with its own capital, language, and culture, and states are further divided into smaller districts.

Our district has its own administration, including a district collector, who manages local governance and services.

Each state has unique geographical features, like mountains, rivers, or coastlines, along with its own traditions and festivals.

Learning about our district and state helps us understand our identity and appreciate the diversity within our country.

Quick Revision Notes

- India divided into states, then districts.
- States have capital, language, culture.
- District administration includes a collector.
- Collector manages local governance, services.
- States have unique geography.
- Also unique traditions, festivals.
- This builds understanding of our identity.
- It shows India's diversity.

Practice Questions

- 1 Name your district and state.
- 2 Research your state's capital.
- 3 Discuss a festival unique to your state.
- 4 Draw a map showing your state.
- 5 Discuss the role of a district collector.
- 6 List a geographical feature of your state.