

Reported Speech - Questions and Commands

Chapter 2: Reported Speech - Questions and Commands · Topic 2

Key Concept

- Reported speech is used to report what someone has said.
- It is used to report questions and commands.
- When reporting a question, the question mark is removed and the sentence is changed into a statement.
- When reporting a command, the imperative form is changed into an infinitive form.

Quick Revision Notes

- Reported speech is used to report what someone has said.
- It is used to report questions and commands.
- When reporting a question, the question mark is removed and the sentence is changed into a statement.
- When reporting a command, the imperative form is changed into an infinitive form.
- Reported speech is used to report what someone has said.
- It is used to report questions and commands.
- When reporting a question, the question mark is removed and the sentence is changed into a statement.
- When reporting a command, the imperative form is changed into an infinitive form.

Practice Questions

- Report the following question in reported speech.
- Report the following command in reported speech.
- Report the following question in reported speech.
- Report the following command in reported speech.
- Report the following question in reported speech.
- Report the following command in reported speech.